

Provide a Debrief of the Feedback Report & Connect to the LCP & Stories of Thriving

INSTRUCTIONS: Use the following checklist, principles, and methodology as guidelines for providing an effective debrief of a leader’s personalized Be Well Lead Well Pulse® assessment feedback report and making connections with the leader’s Leadership Circle Profile (LCP) and stories of thriving.

BEFORE THE DEBRIEF: YOUR CHECKLIST

Attend to these items well before the debrief.

✓ CHECKLIST	DETAILS
Communicate with the leader about the following items...	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li><input type="checkbox"/> PLACE AND TIME. The debrief can be done in person, via videoconference, or by phone. Ask the leader what he or she prefers and make appropriate arrangements.</li> <li><input type="checkbox"/> COMMITMENT. The debrief will take between 75-90 minutes. Ask the leader to protect this time so that they are not distracted or disturbed during their debrief. Fully engaging in the debrief is an act of self-care and an opportunity to gain insights for personal and professional growth.</li> <li><input type="checkbox"/> YOU AS GUIDE. You as the Be Well Lead Well Pulse®-Certified Guide will lead the structured debrief process and manage the time. Let the leader know that there is nothing they need to do to prepare for the debrief.</li> <li><input type="checkbox"/> RECORDING. Tell the leader that they may record the debrief, if desired, via a videoconference recording option, a smartphone voice recorder, handwritten notes, or any other means useful to them. This is their choice and responsibility.</li> <li><input type="checkbox"/> LOGISTICS. If the debrief is not done in person, let the leader know they should be by a computer during the session. In this case, send the leader’s personalized Be Well Lead Well Pulse® feedback report at the appropriate time during the debrief via email.</li> </ul>
Download and prepare to use the leader’s Be Well Lead Well Pulse® Feedback Report.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li><input type="checkbox"/> PREPARE TO SHARE. If the debrief is not done in person, have the leader’s feedback report ready to email at the appropriate time during the session. Otherwise, have an electronic or printed copy available. The leader may also want to have access to their LCP report(s).</li> <li><input type="checkbox"/> PREPARE YOURSELF. Review the leader’s personalized feedback report ahead of the debrief. Make notes on what insights and questions surface for you—these might come in handy during the debrief.</li> </ul>

AT THE DEBRIEF: PRINCIPLES AND METHODOLOGY

Allow three principles and our six-step methodology to guide your delivery of the debrief and create an environment to support the best outcomes for the leader.

PRINCIPLE 1: THE DEBRIEF REFLECTS WELLBEING IN ACTION.

No matter what the feedback, the debrief experience can be a source of upliftment and empowerment for a leader. How can you set the conditions for the most generative debrief? As a few examples:

- Give yourself 5-10 minutes before the debrief conversation to let go of your to-do list or worries and become fully present with yourself. A heart-centered meditation, a body scan practice, a brief walk, or any other type of mindfulness or clearing practice can support you.
- Do a conscious breath with the leader at the start of the debrief to help you both truly arrive—mind, body, and spirit—to the conversation.
- Arrange your chairs side-by-side, rather than talking across a table, if you are physically together during the debrief.

PRINCIPLE 2: THE DEBRIEF DRAWS WISDOM FROM THE LEADER.

Assuming the leader answered the Be Well Lead Well Pulse® assessment questions as honestly as possible, the feedback report provides you a window into this person's state of wellbeing right now. How can you use that feedback to help the leader connect with their own wisdom and create new possibilities to activate and amplify thriving?

PRINCIPLE 3: THE DEBRIEF PROVIDES A SPACIOUSNESS IN WHICH TO PAUSE.

For most leaders (including you), the space to pause is a rare commodity in our hectic world! Yet, it is exactly the skill that allows us to be aware of our current state of being and consciously shift to wellbeing. How can you facilitate the debrief in such a way that spaciousness and open reflection become a lived experience?

DEBRIEF METHODOLOGY

Use this six-step methodology to guide the conversation with the leader about their Be Well Lead Well Pulse® feedback report and make connections to their LCP. You'll likely never use the script provided verbatim; what's most important is to care for the six steps, make the debrief authentic to you, and serve the leader's highest and best.

STEPS	SCRIPT & NOTES
1. Build rapport and share a little about the debrief.	Introduce yourself and your core work. Ask: "Tell me a little about you—your current role as a leader, etc." Ask: "What frame of reference did you come from when participating in Be Well Lead Well Pulse®?" Share: "This debrief is structured. There is nothing you needed to do to prepare for it. We'll spend 75-90 minutes on it. I'll first share information about Be Well Lead Well Pulse® as a tool, then we'll dive into your personalized feedback report. I'll share your report with you midway into the debrief so that we can review it together. Afterwards, we'll explore the links between your report, your LCP feedback, and the narratives you hold about yourself as a leader." Share: "This debrief is an opportunity to explore your personalized Be Well Lead Well Pulse® assessment findings. If you want coaching support to turn your findings into new mindsets and behaviors that empower you to thrive as a leader and whole human being, I would be delighted to discuss my coaching or other professional services to support you, or I can help you find the right resources."
2. Provide information about Be Well Lead Well Pulse®.	Share: "Be Well Lead Well Pulse® is the first integrative leadership assessment focused on wellbeing and transformation. It is built from the belief that you have an innate capacity to thrive and evolve—and tapping into that capacity is vital to lifting your personal fulfillment, leadership effectiveness, and positive impact. Our complexities today are a ripe opportunity to evolve our individual and collective consciousness and competence for thriving. When you thrive, you have greater energy, clarity, and wisdom to amplify thriving in the lives of others; this is the higher order purpose of this tool and our work. As a tool, Be Well Lead Well Pulse® helps you prioritize thriving in your life, as well as identify ways to make thriving a game-changer in your leadership." Share: "The Be Well Lead Well Pulse® assessment is made up of 133 questions drawn from scientific research as well as +30 years of experience working with leaders globally. Your responses to the questions are analyzed using proprietary algorithms, then shared as innovative, easy-to-use scores across six dimensions (Thriving, Fuel, Flow, Wonder, Wisdom, Thriving Amplified) and 19 subcategories. We'll review this information in your personal feedback report in a few minutes."
3. Frame the Be Well Lead Well Pulse® feedback.	Share: "As a human being, you are always being and becoming—you are always engaged in change to some degree. You are not static; thus, your Be Well Lead Well Pulse® findings do not represent a fixed view of you. No assessment can tell you the whole truth about you. You are too unique, multidimensional, and complex. Be Well Lead Well Pulse® is not a typology or personality assessment. Look at your feedback report as a reflection of this period of time."
4. Learn what thriving means to the leader.	Ask: "Before sharing your feedback report, I want to understand what thriving means to you. To explore this, I'd like you to go inward for a moment to recall (think of, feel into) three stories of when you truly thrived. Consider a story from your childhood, a story from early adulthood, and a story that is more recent." (NOTE: As the guide, you may want to do this activity as a guided visualization, including mindful breathing to help the leader physiologically shift into a state of alert relaxation. Also, recognize that some leaders may not come up with three stories--that's ok, too.) Ask: "Would you be willing to briefly share your stories with me?" (Allow the leader to do so.)          "What themes or patterns do you notice across your three stories?" (NOTE: Although we all have the innate capacity to thrive, how we each define it is unique. So, it is important to invite the leader to notice the core stories about thriving unique to them. This can serve as a doorway to reflect on links between their past/present/future narratives and their wellbeing.) Say: "Thanks for sharing a little about what thriving means to you."

5. Review the leader's feedback.	Share the feedback report with the leader and orient them to its contents. Ask about the section, Your Organization: "As you answered questions about Your Organization, what organization were you referring to? What do you notice in your scores? Can you tell me a little about how 'this score' is showing up as your experience of your organization?" Ask about the section, Stress in Your Life &amp; Work: "As you review these scores, what do you notice? Can you tell me a little about how 'this score' is showing up as your experience of life and work?" Review the section, Overview of the Dimensions: "This section can be seen as your personal dashboard—how internally-resourced you believe you are to handle change, upheaval, and complexity, and be effective in your life and leadership." Explain the color scheme (green/high, gold/moderate, red/low) that coincides the scores. Ask about the Overview of the Dimensions: "What do you notice about your scores in these six dimensions? How might this period of your life and work be influencing your scores in these six dimensions?" Link back to Your Organization and Stress in Your Life &amp; Work sections as appropriate. Review the pages reflecting details of each dimension: "Take a few minutes to review the pages on each dimension. Don't rush; we have plenty of time." Ask: "Which dimensions or subcategories would you like to dive into further?" Then debrief the dimension(s) or subcategory(ies) that are of most interest to the leader. This may lead to, for instance, a conversation about all dimensions, the connections between dimensions, or how a particular dimension or subcategory is showing up (or missing) in the leader's life and work today. Afterwards, ask: "What links, if any, do you notice between this wellbeing feedback and your LCP?" Allow this to be an exploration. Examples of additional questions you might ask are: "What Creative Competencies are supporting your wellbeing in this period of life and work?" "What impact does your Reactive Tendencies currently have on your wellbeing?" "What deeper narratives are driving how you lead and how do these narratives effect your capacity to thrive today?"
6. End the debrief with "next steps."	Ask: "What insights did you gain from this debrief? What threads do you see weaving through it? Based on your new awarenesses from this debrief, what 1-2 experiments could you try in service to your wellbeing?" Review possible "next steps" to follow the debrief: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Send the Be Well Lead Well Pulse® Interpretation Manual, if desired. (If time permits, you can also review the contents of this manual during the debrief, possibly even working through a dimension, subcategory, or developmental macro- and micro-shifts with the leader.)</li> <li>• Contract for coaching or other professional support, if appropriate. Or, assist the leader to find other suitable resources, based on their debrief insights.</li> <li>• Discuss how to integrate the leader's debrief insights into a larger learning process they are engaged in, if appropriate, such as a coaching program, leadership development, wellness journey, or culture change work.</li> </ul> Thank the leader for being willing to explore thriving in their life and leadership.

PLANNING A STRUCTURED DEBRIEF

STEPS	MY NOTES
1. Build rapport and share a little about the debrief
2. Provide info about Be Well Lead Well Pulse®
3. Frame the Be Well Lead Well Pulse® feedback
4. Learn what thriving means to the leader
5. Review the leader's feedback
6. End the debrief with "next steps"

PLANNING A STRUCTURED DEBRIEF

STEPS	MY NOTES
1. Build rapport and share a little about the debrief
2. Provide info about Be Well Lead Well Pulse®
3. Frame the Be Well Lead Well Pulse® feedback
4. Learn what thriving means to the leader
5. Review the leader's feedback
6. End the debrief with "next steps"

PLANNING A STRUCTURED DEBRIEF

STEPS	MY NOTES
1. Build rapport and share a little about the debrief
2. Provide info about Be Well Lead Well Pulse®
3. Frame the Be Well Lead Well Pulse® feedback
4. Learn what thriving means to the leader
5. Review the leader's feedback
6. End the debrief with "next steps"	